

Confederate monuments were primarily erected during the racial turmoil of the Jim Crow and the Civil Right's Eras as a way to promote white culture and white rule in our country.

The monuments depict soldiers who fought for the Confederate States of America (aka the confederacy or the confederate army) during the civil war. This is the unrecognized republic that was defeated by the United States after seceding from the nation over the right to continue slavery.

By erecting these monuments of soldiers from an army that was defeated by our nation, an army that fought for the right to own black Americans as slaves, it is clear why they should be removed from prominent display and replaced with monuments that actually reflect our nation as a whole.